The purpose of the program at the middle school and at the elementary school is to provide an educational program, which results in each student's satisfactory achievement, according to ability, interests and talents. The school has the responsibility to teach each student, regardless of innate ability. It must also teach basic democratic concepts and fundamentals, and provide conditions and opportunities where such concepts can be practiced and learned.

Each student shall have the opportunity to develop emotional, intellectual, social, vocational and physical potential according to needs, abilities and interests, and to explore experiences, which may still be unfamiliar.

Different learners need different experiences. Education begins at the present level of each student's achievement and builds upward from that point. It is understood that the process of education is a broadening process; therefore, new experiences lead to more productive life experience.

The teacher is the instrument for guidance in maturity and knowledge. Through this influence and example, the student will participate in the learning process in the way that will best help solve meaningful problems. The administration must view each subject-matter area of the students. Good working conditions and proper teaching materials must be provided. Teachers need to be encouraged to study, experiment and develop new approaches towards the learning process and to work cooperatively with each other in order to solve teaching problems.

Approved: August 1996
Revised and Approved: September 15, 2008